What kind of survey is the Census?

Covers all households

The Census covers all persons and households living in Japan. This includes newborns and non-Japanese residents.

Most important survey

The Census is the most important statistical survey in Japan, conducted once every five years in accordance with the Statistics Act.

Obligated to respond

There is a legal obligation to respond. At the same time, strict regulations are in place for all Census workers regarding the obligation to protect any confidential information obtained during the Census and the handling of Census questionnaires.

Census documents are distributed to each household by Census takers

Census takers will visit each household to deliver the Census documents.

Census results are used for everyday life

The results are used in ways close to our daily lives, such as preparing necessary supplies for disasters and in planning the opening of new convenience stores.

?? Census FAQ

How should students who usually live alone respond?

If you moved out from your parents' home after enrolling and are now living alone, please respond as a single-person household based on your current residence, not your parents' home.

How should students living with their parents respond?

If you are commuting to school from your parents' home, you and the family members you live with are considered a single household. In this case, please have one member of the household respond on behalf of everyone.

Thank you for your cooperation in responding to the Census

Please be aware of fraudulent or suspicious surveys that pretend to be the Census.

Census takers will be wearing a Census Taker ID Card. If you find anything suspicious, please contact the statistical survey office at your local municipality.
